Consul at the Islands—Grand Ceremonials Ob-served at His Funeral—Respect Paid to His Me-mory by the Spanish Authorities and the Population—Affairs of the Consulate, &c., &c.

The circumstances of our being at this island (en route to the rendezvous of the squadron at Isle St. the decease of our late respected Consul for and the cordial manner in which this melancholy event has been sympathized with on the part of all the anthorities of her Majesty the Queen of Spain, the local authorities, and the various consuls and citizens representing foreign governments, and in affording to our Commander-in-Chief, Comodore Crabbe, commanding U. S. forces on the coast of Africa, every possible courtesy and facility for the interment of the body of the deceased in a manner calculated to impress the people with the respect public functionaries, has seemed to me to be of sufficient interest to demand that I should communicate the facts to you "officeusement," and must be my apology for troubling you with this letter.

When at Madeira a few days since, Commodore Crabbe received a letter from Col. Hart, requesting that, if convenient, the flagship should call at this port on her way south, which was most cheerfully omplied with, and the more so as the acting master of this ship is a nephew of the late could.

The ship was accordingly anchored off the mole of the town at 8 o'clock on the morning of the 24th inst., and at 9 o'clock Lieut. Barnet (Flag Lieut.) was despatched by the Commodore to visit the Con-Bul, tender to him a passage to the ship, and to visit the authorities and announce officially his arrival. Lieut. Barnet found the Consul at his residence, but laboring under a severe attack of illness, which to have come very suddenly upon him, as there was evidence in his apartments that the moment the ship had been signalized at day-lightmoment the ship had been signalized at day-lighthe had made preparations for his visit on board; but being now too ill, he excused himself to Lieutenant Barnet for not being able to accompany him to the authorities; asked that his nephew might visit him, and stated that he would visit the Commodore the moment he felt able, and having made these remarks, sat down; when Lieut. Barnet observing that he was distressed, left, but had scarcely crossed the threshold of the room, when he heard a heavy fall, and returning to the apartment, found him extended at full length on the floor, and insensible to speech or movement.

at full length on the floor, and insensible to speech or movement.

Colonel Hart was immediately cared for, and the surgeon to the forces called to his aid, and as soon as possible he was visited by both the surgeons of this ship, the junior remaining with him till 4 A. M. of the 25th, when he breathed his last, without having been able to communicate a single sentence or exhibit other than slight signs of recognizing the presence of his neplew.

The disease or attack seems to have been a rapid and irremediable "cerebral congestion," which no care or skill could relieve.

The decease of Col. Hart having thus taken place while he was engaged in the active duties of the consulate, it would not be singular if he has left some official duties or correspondence in an unfinished state. The most important, however, to our commercial interests, so far as we can discover, is the unfinished business of the American brig America, of Matapoissett, lately condemned in this port (and now here unsold) as unseaworthy, but in this particular case Commodore Crabbe has provided by appointing an agent, and will inform the department regarding this and all other circumstances of the case.

At 8 A. M. yesterday, the 25th, the flag of the cand now here unsold) as unseaworthy, but in this particular case Commodore Crabbe has provided by appointing an agent, and will inform the department regarding this and all other circumstances of the case.

At 8 A. M. yesterday, the 25th, the flag of the Consulate and of this ship was lowered at half mast, the authorities notified of the decease of the Consul, and a request made by Commodore Crabbe that the officers and seamen, marines and band, should land at the proper time with arms and equipments requisite for paying the proper funeral honors to the remains of the deceased—all of which was most cheerfully granted by the Captain General, he expressing his deep regret that his inability to walk (goot) would prevent his accompanying she cortege in person, but that all the departments of her Majesty's government should be represented.

As the next day (yesterday, the 25th) was the festival of the Island, being the auniversary of the defeat of Lord Nelson and his fleet on this island in 1797, it was deemed necessary that the funeral should take place in the evening of the 24th, and the authorities and foreign consuls were accordingly notified (as they desired to be) to be present at 6 o'clock P. M.

In accordance with this arrangement, the officers, band, seamen, marines (infantry), in full uniform, were landed at 5 o'clock P. M., and having met the authorities and foreign consuls at the American Consulate, the funeral took place at the appointed hour and in form according to the annexed programme, the ship firing nine guns, as minute guns, each at an interval of four minutes, while the procession moved:—

American Commander-in-Chief.

The body of the deceased was interred in the walled enclosure of the English cemetery, amid a concourse of people so dense as led us to suppose that nearly the entire population had attended the ceremonies. On passing the military posts the troops were drawn up and saluted the procession, both going to and reterning from the cemetery. Indeed, nothing was omitted on the part of the authorities of the Spanish government to confer honor and respect to the memory of the deceased, and thereby to the government which he represented in these islands. Our men, one and all, returned to the ship with most perfect order and military precision, so that we had nothing to mar the solemnity of the occasion.

The journals and seals of the office have been laced in the keeping of the agent appointed by loom. Crabbe, of which he will duly advise the government.

I have thought that these details would interest you, as the late Consul was from your city or its vicinity, and the courtesy of the officials here has been most unexceptionable—the more remarkable as tenderated the suthorities refused these courtesies to the English only two years since. All the bills and indebtedness of the Consul, in any manner known to exist, are being and will be fully liquidated by the nephew of the deceased, acting master John E. Hart, U. S. N.

MONEY MARKET.

SATURDAY, Oct. 6-6 P. 3 Stock Exchange to-day. Every stock on the list advanced, some considerably. Erie and Reading were in very great demand. Nearly seven thousand shares of Reading were sold, principally in large lots, and for cash.

Nearly five thousand shares of Eric were sold—the bulk for cash; and at the opening State stocks and railroad bonds were freely offered and as freely taken. There was a sale of Louisiana 6's, in one lot of $100,000, at 92, and a small lot sold afterwards at an advance of 34 per cont Blinois Central Railroad bonds sold to the extent of about $160,000—almost entirely for cash—at an improve from the movements going on in certain quarters, we should not be surprised to see an advance of some consequence. It is about as good a stock as can be found in the street for speculation. Any one having more money than they know what to do with, who is disposed to risk a portion of it on a fancy stock, could not do better than to take a "flyer" in Cumberland. not do better than to take a "flyer" in Cumberland. leveland and Toledo advanced to-day, with preity active sales. The present price is dividend on, and not ex-dividend, as reported by a cotemporary. At the first board to-day Virginia 6's advanced ½ per cent; Eric Bonds, 1875, ½; Illinois Central Bonds, 1; Harlem, ½; Cumberland, ½; Eric Railroad, ½; Panama, 1; Galena and Chicago, 1; Reading, 1; Michigan Central, 2; Michigan Southern, 2; Illinois Central Railroad, ½; Cleveland and Toledo Railroad, ½; All the Western railroad stocks were in active read, 14. At the second board the upward movement continued in full force, with pretty active sales. Cumberland adwhich there, with precipe active sales. Combertain advanced 3/2 per cent; Galena and Chicago, 1; Harlem, 1/4; Erie, 1/4; Reading Railroad, 1/4. There were no sales of Hudson River Railroad this afternoon. This morning there was a sale at 361/4 per cent, the lowest we have noticed for a long time. The condition of this company cannot certainly be understood. expenses, and we have left $30,113. If the other items of expenditure remained the same as in 1854, there was a deficiency on the 30th of Sept., 1855, of $54,178, and not one ficiency on the 30th of Sept., 1855, of $54,178, and not one cent reserged for dividends or depreciation. Upon what possible grainds any person is induced to high Hudson River Railroad stock under this state of things we cannot imagine. They are either ignorant of the present condition of the company, and the ultimate fate of the stock—total annihilation—or they cling to that most absurd of all hopes, that the great consolidated Central Company intends to buy them up at fifty per cent.

It is beginning to be conceded that the Central capital is already about large enough; that it has taken in of bad and worthless roads a sufficient quantity, without swallowing the Hudson River Railroad at $12,000,000. Besides, no Legislature could be induced to add another dollar to the immense money power already fastened dollar to the immense money power already fastened upon its vitals. Any legislator who should vote for such a bill would be tarred and feathered by his consti-tuents on his return home, and deservedly so.

An officer of the Galena and Chicago Railroad Company was recently asked by a large stockholder, what he considered the stock of the company worth. His answer was that when it touched 150 per cent, it would begin to approximate its actual value as a permanent investment. Holders of the stock can form a pretty correct idea from this of what it is worth, and govern themselves accordingly. Any holder not obliged to realize who sells at anything below 150 per cent, or even at that, makes a mistake, and will see it before he gets much older.

The exports from this port last week were quite heavy and full one-half of the aggregate was in breadstuffs. The value of merchandise shipped to each port was as follows :-- less animated and the demand from the interior less ex tensive. There continues, however, a good demand for certain styles of goods and desirable fabrics, such as prices are well maintained. Cloths and satinets of finare dull, especially older styles and patterns, which are more or less unsaleable. Ginghams are without altera-tion. Drills, owing to a fair foreign demand and steady sales. Corset jeans are in good demand, and have a ten-dency to higher prices. Printing cloths are in good supof the previous week. Brown sheetings and shirting are dull and difficult of sale, without some concession in prices. Bleached sheetings are also dull, and sell quite slowly. Cotton duck is in better demand, at steady prices. The receipts of foreign dry goods have been larger for the past month than for the same period last larger for the past month than for the same period last year. All new styles of desirable and seasonable goods have found ready purchasers at full prices, while old styles and fabrics have been sold off, through auction stores, to the highest bidder. Plaid goods are still in vegue, and sell well at good prices. This season's demand for French goods has stimulated the demand for increased importations from that quarter, and heavy shipments are said to be on their way hither, both by sailing vessels and by steamers. Such a fact, when specie would almost certainly be called for sconer or later, to pay for the bulk of them, formerly excited much apprehension. But not so now. The case is very different.

The deficiency of the harvest in Germany and in France The deficiency of the harvest in Germany and in France will enable us to pay for all the goods from France we shall want for consumption, in breadstuffs, and, if we are economical, leave a balance in our favor. We can also supply England with produce sufficient to keep down the price of sterling bills. In domestic goods the low stages of water in the streams of New England have to some extent influenced production. Many descriptions have continued to maintain great firmness. Osnaburgs are in good demand and prices firm. Denims are held at the prices of the former prices. Prints are heavy, and some sales have been reported, in lots, at a decline. Lawns are plenty, and prices without improvement. There is a better de-mand for cotton warp, and black mixed is at $1.25 a $1 35. Satinets are in fair request. Tweeds of desirable descriptions are active, at full prices. Keutucky jeans are dull. Flancels and blan-kets are in fair demand, without change in flannels are in light stock and prices firm. The pas week's business in domestic dry goods has been quite large. The season for this class of goods, however, eslarge. The season for this class of goods, however, especially as far as the trade of the distant South and South-western States is concerned, is drawing to a close, while the near trade, which, though buying usually less heavily at any one period, generally extend their business more over the year, from the great facilities they possess of communication. Upon the whole, the dry goods trade may congratulate itself on having enjoyed the largest and most remunerative business experienced for several reases need. for several years past.
